

FIGHTING FOR LIFE IN THE DEATH-BELT considers the controversial institution of capital punishment in America through the eyes of Stephen Bright, the nation's leading anti-death penalty lawyer. For twenty-five years Bright has defended death row inmates deep in the heart of the nation's death-belt – the Southeastern states where ninety percent of executions occur.

In the film, we follow Bright during the final days and hours as he desperately fights to spare two clients from execution. Although both men stand convicted of horrible crimes, Bright never waivers in his dedication, and presents compelling arguments against the criminal justice system that seeks to end his clients' lives.
